

Associated with eight Nobel laureates since 1902

Founded in 1881, the University of Liverpool was one of the United Kingdom's first civic universities and has been associated with eight Nobel laureates. Today more than 4,500 graduates from more than 130 countries have earned a master's or doctoral degree from the university.

The University's online programmes are specifically designed to fit the demanding schedules of working professionals. Courses explore exciting new concepts in real-world scenarios to help prepare students for leadership positions in their chosen fields. The university also offers postgraduate certificate programmes to address specific needs within an organization.

Credits earned through the University of Liverpool's online certificate programmes can be transferred into its online master's programmes. The University of Liverpool is a member of the Russell Group of leading research universities and accredited by the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education (QAA).

100% Online

The University of Liverpool's exclusive e-learning partnership with Laureate Online Education has developed a 100% online learning environment that is successfully delivering educational and career benefits to over 4,000 working professionals, from over 175 countries across the globe – available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Deadlines are tight and assignments demanding, but our Doctoral degree students find studying online a life changing experience that provides direct career benefits and a network of valuable, international contacts that serves them for years.

"Online provides a more continuous stream of thinking, collaborating, and knowledge sharing."

Neil J. Campbell, Founder and Chairman of a Global Healthcare and IT Technology Development Corporation, USA; Doctor of Business Administration Student, University of Liverpool
